| Background | The data at Oakland Technical High School shows that in the subjects of Math and Science, there is disproportionality among the grades of African American and Latinx students when compared with their White and Asian counterparts. African American and Latinx students overwhelmingly receive D's and F's in these particular subject areas. There is a need to address this disparity and this requires difficult conversations that are long overdue and we will begin with the Math Department. Collaboration with Quetzal Education Consulting will allow for experienced facilitation of these challenging conversations and an opportunity for Math teachers to reflect on their grading practices and implicit biases and how they impact Black and Brown students. |
