I. Project Summary

Overall Goal.

Educators for Social Responsibility (ESR) will serve as a primary thought partner with Oakland Unified School District, more specifically ESR will work with district leaders (High School Executive Director, and SLC & i3 Director), Oakland Technical High School and the SLC leadership teams of three high schools in OUSD. The ESR program consultants will coach, collaborate and consult with OUSD to help them in supporting High Performing, High Achieving Classrooms and leadership development.

Background

Educators for Social Responsibility (ESR) is a national leader in school reform and provides professional development, consultation, and educational resources to adults who support the development of young people in middle and high school. Since the early 1980s, ESR has a long history and a wealth of experience facilitating the change process and much practical expertise in creating positive learning environments in schools.

ESR creates, disseminates, models and teaches core practices that reduce educational disparities and facilitate equal access to quality instruction and opportunities for students. In addition, ESR helps schools build high quality social and emotional learning programs and initiatives that promote respect and help to reduce intolerance, harassment, bullying, and risky and aggressive student behaviors. We also help students develop and strengthen social skills, emotional competencies, and qualities of character that increase personal and interpersonal efficacy and cultivate social responsibility.

ESR offers a research-based, youth development oriented approach. This comprehensive approach helps schools build a positive climate and culture, a disciplined and supportive learning environment, and personalized, high-achieving and high performing classrooms that promote healthy development and academic success for all students. Our aim is to ensure that every student develops the tools, skills, and attitudes that enable them to graduate from high school with a postsecondary plan that matches their talents, abilities, interests, and aspirations.

II. Responsibilities - Work Plan / Activities

The work for this contract will commence in August 2012 and will finish in June 2013.

1. Needs Assessment and Preliminary Planning

The ESR program consultant will conduct preliminary planning with the High School Executive Director, SLC & i3 Director, and principal and leadership team of Oakland Tech to establish goals, a scope of work, and roles and responsibilities. The ESR consultant will also map out timelines and action steps to create a work-plan to ensure successful implementation of the project. We will help the district leaders articulate, prioritize, and schedule specific professional learning strands for the principals, SLC leadership teams, and Oakland Tech for the year that will be delivered through institute days, proficiency modules, group embedded coaching, and targeted workshops.

2. Oakland Tech High School's Professional Services

Creating High-Performing, High-Achieving Classrooms helps teachers learn a range of research-based instructional strategies for engaging all students and building a community of learners who can engage in whole group, small group, and independent work. Teachers learn how to model, teach, practice, and assess habits of learning that increase student efficacy, self-discipline, responsible decision making and group participation skills along with key metacognitive, social and emotional life skills that have the biggest impact on student achievement in all classrooms. Engagement strategies and structures like academic conferencing, and cooperative learning protocols increase students' motivation, attention, effort, and ownership of learning.

* ESR's holistic approach to teacher effectiveness is compatible with Charlotte Danielson's Enhancing Professional Practice: A Framework for Teaching (2007).

Professional Development Institute: ESR will support faculty members in a summer institute and follow up * professional learning days to develop and strengthen a set of shared research-based classroom instructional strategies across all grade levels and across all academic courses. Staff will develop a deeper understanding of the characteristics of five kinds of adolescent learners, factors that influence students' capacity to learn, and benchmarks of adolescent growth and development.

Staff will also acquire knowledge and skills and participate in experiences that align with the common core and that will support them in establishing: 1) a well-paced, well-managed, and organized classroom that creates and maintains a safe, orderly, respectful, learning-focused culture; 2) A high performing community of learners who can engage effectively and efficiently in whole group, small group, and independent student work.

Core practices that faculty will learn and/or deepen could include: (a) real time formative assessment; (b) academic and behavioral conferencing; (c) practice and mastery of habits of learning and self-discipline; (d) effective teacher talk; (e) teaching for thinking: problematizing the curriculum; (f) differentiation by choice and challenge; (g) effort-based learning.

* The ESR consultant will work with the principal and key leaders to identify the core practices and strategies most essential to the needs of the staff.

* The ESR consultant will work with the full staff on three professional development days.

PD Proficiency Modules (Workshops): The ESR consultant will provide proficiency modules, time permitting, that reinforce core knowledge, skills and instructional strategies that are introduced in the institute and professional development days that lead to implementation of shared instructional strategies among the staff.

Embedded Coaching: ESR provides embedded coaching directly to grade-level teams, departments, and course-alike cohorts. The ESR consultant will maximize capacity in school leaders at Oakland Technical High School to facilitate structured instructional rounds, using an observation protocol to collect data that aligns with the core knowledge and skills learned in the institute days and proficiency modules. Through a group embedded coaching framework and protocols, the ESR consultant will involve cohorts of teachers in a collaborative inquiry cycle to analyze data, and will provide targeted coaching that is aligned with data trends. This will support teachers in their efforts to make their own teaching practice more public and visible.

Coaching Capacity for Assistant Principals: ESR provides individual coaching, collaboration and consultation to school leaders responsible for supporting teacher effectiveness. Sessions are driven by the school improvement goals and goals self-identified by staff members and teams. The ESR consultant will serve as a thought partner; a coach who listens and ask meditative questions to support thinking, a consultant who provides ideas, examples, and case studies to jumpstart thinking, and a collaborator who helps facilitate strategic problem solving.

ESR will provide side-by-side mentoring and coaching for school leaders so they can conduct more intensive and targeted instructional rounds. ESR will assist school leaders in strengthening their observation and coaching skill sets in order to identify, discuss, and evaluate the differences between effective and ineffective teaching practices. ESR will maximize capacity in school leaders to develop a feedback system and protocol using data and a reflecting conversation framework.

ESR will also work closely with the leadership teams and school leaders to closely align embedded professional learning to principal expectations, teacher evaluation, core standards and successful implementation of shared instructional practices.

Assessment and Evaluation Activities: The ESR program consultant will work with school leaders to help them identify a transparent method to set up a system to review ninth grade data periodically, assess results, and adjust classroom instructional and behavioral supports. This will result in a data assessment method and numerical targets for student outcomes that serve as benchmarks and indicators of success.

3. Principal Leadership Development

ESR will collaborate with district leaders on a professional learning strand for principals to deepen their understanding of the RTII framework and the ways to systematize a cohesive set of school-wide academic interventions that will reduce failure rates and increase achievement and graduation rates. More specifically, ESR will facilitate workshops for principals on the following:

- Data collection systems and data monitoring and review cycles to inform academic interventions and assess the progress of the interventions

- Systems and protocols for identifying students at academic risk and explore three tiers of scaffolded instructional and academic learning supports and academic interventions that are customized to meet a range of students' learning needs
- Support structures and strategies around monitoring and motivating student progress, and advising students and parents on accessing needed instructional services.
- Clear systems of early indicators for student intervention (struggling and/or unchallenged students) and types of academic interventions for individuals and groups of students.

4. SLC Leadership Development

Coaching Capacity for Assistant Principals and Teacher Leaders: ESR will support the assistant principal and teacher leaders to tackle the skills and craft of leading teams through workshops throughout the year. The ESR consultant will work collaboratively with assistant principals and teacher leaders to create the conditions in professional learning communities where teachers are thinking and learning together about their practice. This type of facilitated dialogue will support and sustain a shared vision of the educational program, where teachers take collective responsibility for students' learning and their academic success.

ESR will work with district leaders to identify a venue to maximize capacity in the assistant principals and teacher leaders with a focus on the following: effective and productive (results-oriented) collaboration; team work to explore and agree upon instructional practices that will reach and engage all learners; provide direct professional learning, coaching and consultation to help teacher leaders work with their teams to develop their goals, roles, responsibilities and agreements for how they will learn and work together; support teacher-leaders by co-facilitating beginning sessions or by modeling specific learning protocols that ESR expects leaders to learn and deliver (i.e. lesson study, sharing of student work, data analysis protocols, collegial inquiry, or text seminars); decision making and consensus building tools; conflict management; dealing with difficult people; how to influence for results; constructive group feedback; problem solving skills.

III. Materials

All participants will receive Making Learning REAL: Reaching and Engaging ALL Learners. The guide is organized around seven core practices that increase engagement in learning, including a set of readings that link theory and research to each of the core practices. Making Learning REAL also offers a comprehensive guide for assessing student learning; ideas for preparation and start-up of the new school year, the first day of class, and the first month of school; and a primer on personal conferencing. Over 60 protocols in a special appendix offer suggestions for incorporating topics from Making Learning REAL into school-based professional development.

The SLC Leaders will receive a collection of critical documents and build a leadership notebook to deepen and cultivate their knowledge, skills and competencies.

V. Evaluation Plan

ESR will partner with the Center for Research in Educational Equity, Assessment, and Teaching Excellence (CREATE) at the University of California, San Diego who will provide formative and summative analysis of our efforts to support Oakland Tech. CREATE researchers will design and arrange for surveys in the fall and spring, targeting participating teachers and students to ascertain teachers' knowledge and implementation of the ESR-related practices. ESR staff will help to administer surveys and other evaluation tools. For example, the pre-survey will gauge teachers' existing knowledge of restorative practices, problem-solving strategies, instructional strategies and supports, and familiarity with various academic interventions, protocols and procedures. The post-survey will be administered at the end of the academic year and will gauge individual and school-level faculty understanding of these practices, after working closely with ESR. Student surveys will accompany the teacher surveys to gauge their classroom experiences as their teachers implement ESR practices, including program implementation and effectiveness on two key factors: (1) personalization – improved teacher-student relationships and (2) academic environment – improved learning environment (e.g. classroom organization, pacing, scaffolding, and rigor).

Finally, CREATE researchers will analyze measures of student academic achievement. Direct measures will include state test scores in English and mathematics, course passing rates in English and mathematics, and GPAs if relevant. Indirect measures will include attendance, suspension rates, and tardies. A fidelity measure will be constructed to assess the degree of classroom implementation of the ESR program. This measure will be based on a composite of ongoing classroom observations by ESR as well as teacher and student survey responses. This measure will be included as a predictor in several regression models, which will examine the relationship between school and teacher implementation of the reform, academic impact(s), and student perceptions of their learning experiences.

VI. Communication Plan

The ESR consultant shall ensure regular and ongoing communication between the parties during on-site visits, via phone, Skype and email.

VII. Consultant Bio(s)

Nicole Frazier joined ESR in 2009. Nicole has extensive experience in secondary school re-design, instruction, data-driven decision making, professional development, advisory, postsecondary supports, and freshman orientation and intervention programs. She has wide-ranging experiences having worked with urban at-risk youth, rural schools, English language learners, high-performing large comprehensive high schools, and small turnaround schools. Nicole helps leadership teams and faculty develop school-wide systems and practices that support teaching and learning to build an intentional academic culture.

Carol Miller Lieber is a national leader in integrating principles of personalization and youth development into everyday practices and structures for middle and high schools. As a senior consultant for Educators for Social Responsibility, she supports schools at every level to embed the five R's— rigor, relevance, relationships, responsibility, and readiness for college and career.

Facilitating academic success, healthy development, and postsecondary aspirations for every student has been at the heart of her work for over 40 years. Lieber has taught students at all grade levels, co-founded a small urban secondary school in 1973, and served as a faculty member at Washington University, University of Missouri, and Lesley University in Cambridge. She is the author of many books and other publications including: Making Learning REAL, Getting Classroom Management RIGHT, The Advisory Guide, and "Increasing College Access through School-Based Models of Postsecondary Preparation, Planning, and Support".

Michele Tissiere, ESR's director of professional services, began working with ESR in 1989. She has extensive experience in the creation of systems and structures for effective change, helping to shape faculty, peer and classroom cultures. Currently she works with urban elementary, middle, and high schools and districts. She supports principals and leadership teams on data-driven dialogue, instructional practice, curriculum design, and assessment. She has consulted with middle and high schools on school-wide initiatives to improve climate and culture. Michele earned an M.S. from Colorado State University in 1982 and a B.S. from SUNY Geneseo in 1980.

Summary of Qualifications for ESR

DEMONSTRATED SUCCESSFUL EXPERIENCE

Educators for Social Responsibility (ESR) provides research-based professional development, resources and support to foster increased academic achievement, healthy social and emotional development, and school success for students in K-12 schools. ESR has a proven track record of offering practical consultation, training, coaching, and resources to schools through a wide variety of programming in four areas essential to school success: 1) climate, discipline, and behavior supports; 2) youth development; 3) student-centered teaching and learning; and 4) vision and culture. We provide these services individually and in various combinations, including all of them combined for whole school reform.

We have far-reaching experience in managing complex change, and are producing results annually in over 150 schools, primarily in large urban school districts such as New York, Atlanta, Austin, San Francisco, Chicago, Washington DC, Denver, and Toledo. What follows are examples of ESR's experiences and demonstrated effectiveness working extensively in two large, urban school districts (New York City and Austin, TX) and in selected other sites.

New York City

Office of School and Youth Development (OSYD)

ESR has worked with OSYD for 8 years, providing a range of services to scores of schools with widely varying student populations and needs.

Guided Discipline and Personalized Student Support

Our most recent involvement includes helping schools implement Guided Discipline and Personalized Support, ESR's approach to helping middle and high school teachers organize and manage their classrooms in ways that increase students' learning and cooperation, self-management, responsible decision making, and disciplined work habits. These skills and habits lead to greater academic success and personal and social efficacy. ESR's approach to discipline and student support has an instructional, problem-solving orientation. It emphasizes modeling, teaching, practicing, and assessing the behaviors and habits that teachers expect.

We began implementing Guided Discipline in NYC schools in 2005 and have since provided training through OSYD for over 2,780 middle and high school teachers. In the 2010-2011 school year alone, we trained teachers on site in over 15 middle and high schools. We have also designed, planned, and implemented Guided Discipline and Personalized Support programs for leadership teams at many middle and high schools.

Support to Change "Persistently Dangerous" Schools

In 2003-2004 and again in 2007-2008, we provided technical assistance to seven middle schools identified as persistently dangerous by the State of New York. Work at each school included needs assessment; development of new disciplinary protocols for administrators, faculty, and the security team; consultation with union reps on the safety plan; coaching of principals and pupil personnel teams; support of faculty to implement Guided Discipline; consultation to create an effective SAVE room; and consultation on building safety and security.

Selected results:

In 2004, MS #131 went from being the most unstable and dangerous middle school in Region 9 to being a safe, orderly, productive learning environment through a transition in leadership supported by ESR.

Four of the seven schools on the persistently dangerous list that we worked with during the 2007-08 school year met disciplinary targets that enabled them to be removed from the list at the end of the year.

Alternative Learning Centers

ESR supported the planning and implementation of a complete redesign of 28 long-term suspension centers from 2007- 2011, including facilitation of planning meetings with five borough principals, intensive training for 28 site supervisors, including center-wide disciplinary practices and protocols, faculty training in advisory, personalized instruction, and guided discipline at each center site. Professional development included a four-day capacity building institute for several people from each of the sites that deepened their expertise with the core structures and practices that ESR introduced. We continue to work directly with borough principals and site supervisors to strengthen implementation of common practices and protocols.

Selected results:

Attendance at Alternative Learning Centers increased over 30 percent in 2008 - the first year that they were reconstituted. Students earn credit for work completed; common educational program standards and behavioral expectations are implemented across sites.

Office of Postsecondary Readiness (formerly Office of Multiple Pathways to Graduation) (2008-present)

Whole School Reform

ESR continues to provide a wide range of leadership consultation and faculty professional development to several of the new schools that the Office of Postsecondary Readiness has helped to launch. These include the High School for Excellence and Innovation, started in 2009, and the Bronx Design and Construction Academy, launched this school year. Murray Hill Academy, featured below, is another such school.

Transfer Schools

ESR supported the development and implementation of advisory programs, or strengthening of existing ones, and the implementation of Guided Discipline in 12 Transfer Schools. Transfer Schools are small, academically rigorous, full-time high schools designed to re-engage students who are over-age and under-credited or have dropped out of high school. The essential elements of Transfer Schools include: a personalized learning environment, rigorous academic standards, student-centered pedagogy, support to meet instructional and developmental goals, and a focus on connections to college.

PULSE High School (2005-2011)

ESR provided intensive faculty development focusing on personalized instruction, project-based learning, the workshop lesson model, and formative assessment and development of SMARTQuest introductory learning-to-learn course for new transfer students.

Selected results:

PULSE High School has one of the highest Regents exam pass rates among all of New York City's transfer schools.

Office of Small School Development (2007-2008)

ESR assisted 10 new principals in their launch of new small schools by conducting six half-day sessions with them on climate-culture, discipline, advisory, and youth development. These sessions were followed up in year one with two site visits per school to provide coaching for and troubleshooting with each principal, as well as some PD for their faculties. We also trained all of the staff from three of these schools on advisory development and implementation.

Whole School Reform at Murray Hill Academy (2009 – Present)

Murray Hill Academy (MHA) is a new small school in New York City that admits an approximately equal mix of first year 9th graders and repeat 9th graders. The school's mission is to provide all entering students with a personalized educational program that ensures that new 9th graders stay on track to graduate in four years and repeat 9th graders accumulate at least a year's worth of credits in the first year at MHA to get back on track to graduate.

ESR began supporting Murray Hill Academy's principal and assistant principal with planning assistance in the 2009-2010 school year. We consulted on the development of their proposal in areas such as scheduling, structural issues, the parameters of advisory, and blended learning. Before the school started in September 2010, ESR trained the entire staff in our Guided Discipline approach (see below) and in instructional strategies for reaching and engaging all learners.

Throughout the first full school year, ESR consultants acted as thought partners with the school's leadership team and met frequently to strategize around issues of school culture and climate and classroom and school-wide management and discipline – especially related to students with high needs. We also continued doing professional development around classroom management and personalization, conducted classroom observations, and coached teachers. Our professional development (PD) expanded to helping teachers learn effective teacher talk and our consulting continued on structural issues, such as how to handle a small group of students that were negatively affecting the school culture. One result of this process was the development of a "transformation zone" for 14 students who began to attend school on a different schedule. ESR's support continues for the 2011-2012 school year with a particular focus on professional development for new staff.

Murray Hill Academy had significant achievements in its first year. Here are some selected results:

Academics

Repeat 9th graders entered Murray Hill Academy in September 2010 with an average of 3.8 credits. By the end of the school year, on average, repeat 9th graders earned 16.9 credits and 92 percent of them earned enough credits to be promoted. In addition, many students chose to take Regents exams in their first year at Murray Hill.

- 46 students passed Global Regents after one year of instruction. 74 percent were new 9th graders, 24 percent of whom entered MHA as Level 2 students in ELA.
- 63 students passed Integrated Algebra Regents after one year of instruction. 79 percent of those who passed were new 9th graders, 48 percent of whom entered MHA as Level 2 students in math.
- 10 students passed the Geometry Regents after one semester of instruction. 80 percent were new 9th graders and 20 percent were repeat 9th graders.

Attendance

Comparing the attendance records of its students in previous schools prior to attending MHA, both the new freshmen and repeat 9th graders increased their attendance during their first year at Murray Hill from 86 percent in 2009-2010 to 88 percent in 2010-2011 and 69.4 percent in 2009-2010 to 76 percent in 2010-2011, respectively.

Attendance for a targeted group of 10 students rose from an average of 49.3 percent in 2009-2010 to 75.8 percent in 2010-2011.

Student Feedback

Focus groups held with students at the end of the school year showed a lot of support from students for their new school. Here are examples of comments from students:

This is a wonderful school because we make our own choices, but they push us in the right direction. It preps us for college because teachers give us projects every month and they don't get on our case every time to do it. They treat us like adults.

Murray Hill is my second chance. I came from a school where I got kicked out. I only had eight credits. Now I have 21 credits. [MHA] helps you with getting more credits.

I feel better now. My grades are better. It motivates me to see my good grades and [I know] that the teachers will give me the extra help I need.

Teachers push us and they know our strengths and weaknesses and they make time for us during the day and after school too...Over the years, I wasn't interested in reading. I wasn't really into the news. But Achieve 3000 keeps me up with current events. When we are in English or Global and we have a project to do I like using the computers.

Austin, Texas

Since 2006, ESR has worked extensively with the Austin Independent School District (AISD) to implement significant changes in 11 of their high schools. We supported the design and implementation of advisory in all of these schools and played a major role in whole school reform/redesign in five of them.

Advisory

ESR provided support to the AISD from 2007 through 2010 to develop and improve advisory programs at its high schools. As a result of this effort, there are advisory programs in grades 9-12 at 11 out of 16 high schools within AISD. These advisory programs, and the personalization structures they offer, make important contributions to higher academic achievement, greater college and career readiness, healthy social and emotional development, and positive school culture. The schools and the district have new capacity to sustain each of these programs and the advisory effort as a whole.

ESR's specific services included the following:

- Consultation with technical assistance for district personnel to build the district's capacity to provide on-going leadership, direction, and guidance for advisory and to integrate advisory with broader redesign efforts
- School-based consultation, coaching, and technical assistance to build leadership capacity among advisory co-chairs, coordinators, administrative liaisons, advisory committees, counselors, and principals in areas including strategic planning, professional development, curriculum development, and assessment
- Professional development for advisors, counselors and principals including: a) pre-service, b) in-service, and c) open enrollment, Professional Development Center workshops
- Consultation regarding district efforts to engage with parents/guardians and communicate with various constituencies in the larger community about the efficacy of advisory and its important contribution to the academic success and healthy development of youth and positive school climate and culture
- Development of advisory assessment tools and protocols, assistance with analysis of data, and training for staff to be able to carry out ongoing assessment activities

Selected results:

Climate survey data from Austin, TX over three years of advisory implementation in eight high schools showed a steady increase in the extent to which students felt cared about, listened to, and supported by teachers, knew how they were doing in school, could set and achieve goals, and get help with problems.

According to the teacher exit survey, 4 of the 6 ESR intensive schools scored 2.75 or better on the metric called Achievement Press - "The degree to which students, parents, teachers, and principals exert pressure for high standards and school improvement," while only 3 of 10 other high schools scored as highly.

Students reported significant increases in the frequency of academic advising and college and career preparation in their advisory groups in the 2009-2010 school year over previous years.

Comprehensive Support at James Bowie High School (2006 – present)

This public, comprehensive high school is the largest of AISD's high schools and serves over 2,800 students with 200 faculty and staff members. ESR supported the development of a freshman focus initiative called Launch at Bowie High School that began in the 2009-2010 school year. Launch includes intensive student orientation; common practices and core skills across core courses; 9th grade only advisory where students learn study as well as social and emotional skills; student leaders who co-facilitate advisory; scaffolded and required learning supports for Freshman; and embedded professional development during the school day.

ESR played an integral role in helping Bowie plan and implement Launch. We conducted three all-day retreats for all faculty who teach 9th grade; consulted with the principal and the re-design team during the Launch development process; conducted a three-day Launch institute for the AP, redesign facilitators, and co-leaders of 9th grade professional learning communities; assisted Launch faculty with planning and implementation of orientation and 9th grade advisory; and did multiple days of follow-up with the redesign facilitator, and with Launch co-leaders and its planning team.

We also have been providing support for instructional coaches and course-alike professional learning communities during the school's shift to teaching and learning in the block, including intensive learning retreats, creation of professional development sessions for professional learning communities, coaching and trouble-shooting with the coaches, and observation protocols for "learning walks" focused on teaching and learning in the block. In the summer of 2009, 2010, and 2011 we conducted intensive summer institutes and follow-up sessions for 9th and 10th grade faculty called Making Learning REAL.

Selected results:

Freshman failure rates were reduced by 20 percent in the first semester of the LAUNCH program.

Passing rates for 9th graders in algebra, biology, English, and geometry were better for both of the years since Launch began in the fall of 2009 over the previous year (2008-2009).

Feedback from the AISD Office of Redesign

In a letter to the superintendent of the Atlanta Public Schools in March 2010, the executive director of the AISD Office of Redesign, Kent Ewing, advocated for ESR saying:

ESR has served as the primary service provider for AISD Advisory Program for the past four years and has been a true partner in helping us grow what we believe is one of the finest advisement systems in the country. ESR has helped us to understand that if we are serious about authentically improving student academic achievement and attainment then we have to be attentive to students' social-emotional health as we are to their intellectual health. ESR has earned our respect and loyalty by providing unmatched professionalism and reliability, engaging and differentiated professional development, data-driven approaches to continuous school improvement, and tools and systems to drive improvement at every level of the organization. We can say without hesitation that you will do no better than ESR.

Baltimore, MD - Afya Charter Middle School (2007-2009)

Afya Public Charter School ("Afya" means health in Swahili) was started in 2008 with a focus on the intellectual, physical, social, and emotional health of all its students. It serves over 300 students in the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades, 99 percent of whom are African-American and 80 percent of whom are eligible for free and reduced meals.

ESR was the primary partner supporting the planning and start-up of Afya and then provided a range of services for implementation. During 2007-2008, ESR provided extensive consulting to the school's leaders to help them create and plan their school. In the summer of 2008, we spent two weeks on site providing facilitation to help them identify their core values and construct their school schedule. We also consulted and trained on setting up their school-wide discipline system and helped them set up a climate-culture team and provided training in this area as well.

Early in the 2008-2009 school year, we consulted with them on setting up their advisory program and trained advisors. We also trained the whole faculty on personalized instruction and how to have the needs and characteristics of adolescent learners drive their curriculum and instruction. During the year, we conducted many school visits for classroom observations and teacher/advisor coaching. ESR continued its support for the school in its third year with onsite consultation and troubleshooting on their overall progress, as well as on advisory and their school-wide and classroom discipline systems.

Feedback from Afya Staff

ESR has received very positive feedback from this school about our support. Campbell McLean, the 6th-grade ancient history teacher, emailed us recently and said, "Thanks again for the great support you've given us. We still live and breathe a lot of the strategies we got from you and our school is going great because of them."

Afya Principal Will McKenna offered this feedback:

ESR has had a profound effect on all aspects of our school. We worked with ESR as a thought partner when planning our school and they provided coaching, consulting, and training during our first two years. They really challenged us to think about and focus on the development needs of adolescents—at each different grade and during every part of the school day—in every aspect of our program. It's been two years since we've worked with ESR and I refer regularly to what I learned from them and constantly strive to reach the expectations that ESR set for me and for our school.

Selected results:

In its first year, Afya Charter School students averaged 97 percent attendance. Students scored 88 percent proficiency and advanced in reading and 81 percent proficiency and advanced in math on state standardized tests.

In the 2010-2011 school year, Afya 8th graders performed in the top ten in Baltimore on the Maryland state tests in overall reading, and third in math.

Washington, DC

ESR began supporting the DC Public Schools (DCPS) in 2009 with training, coaching, consultation, and technical assistance to help 20 of their K-8 schools (serving grades 6-8) and four high schools design, implement, and begin to assess their advisory programs. Major services included:

- Provision of capacity building sessions that focus on curriculum review, professional development institutes planning, preparation for follow-up visits to schools, and accountability and assessment for a Central Office Design Team
- Facilitation of leadership institutes for School Design Teams in areas including assessment, curriculum development, professional development, and strategic planning and design
- Consultation and coaching for the district project manager, district design team members, principals, and school advisory coordinators or co-chairs on topics including curriculum development, professional development planning, and assessment

- Professional development for advisors

We are now serving as a primary thought partner and professional services consultant with DCPS over the next four years, expanding advisory to all DCPS middle schools. We are working to build capacity in key district leaders responsible for advisory and build in cross-school experiences to create a professional learning community of Advisory Leadership Teams for participating middle schools. The Advisory Leadership Teams will build skills and competencies in advisory design and implementation to meet DCPS' advisory goals in service of all students. ESR is also building capacity in principals and other key building-level administrators to provide leadership for the implementation and continuous improvement of advisory.

Feedback from the DC Public Schools

Heather Cabrera, manager of college readiness of the Office of Secondary School Transformation, provided the following feedback about ESR in a letter dated April 23, 2010:

ESR staff members have demonstrated deep content knowledge and exceptional skill in working with school staff. They are strong facilitators and have a wealth of knowledge about school culture, youth development, and what makes advisories work. They treat school leaders and staff with great respect, and work hard to build on a school's strength and vision rather than impose a predetermined plan. They have an impressive ability to adapt and respond on the spot as they work with school staff. They have been an invaluable resource to schools and especially me as the district program manager. We recommend them highly without qualification.

Additional examples of positive client evaluations

Serving as an intermediary organization for the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and the Michael & Susan Dell Foundation, the College Board has developed a new small school model for secondary school reform that has, as one of its core elements, the "personalization of the learning environment." Therefore, it is without hesitation that I write in support of Educators for Social Responsibility's outstanding work as demonstrated in their support, guidance and assistance in developing a quality middle/high school advisory program for our network of College Board Schools in Buffalo, Rochester, and New York City. The Advisory Guide, written by Rachel Poliner and Carol M. Lieber has served as the cornerstone for establishing advisory programs in our College Board Schools and has no doubt contributed to their success. I cannot recommend an organization more highly!

– Helen Santiago, Executive Director, New York Initiative, College Board Schools (2009)

I am familiar with ESR through their classroom management support program, Guided Discipline. I had the pleasure of receiving professional development support through a grant from Connie Cuttle, and I can confidently say the level of professionalism and expertise was invaluable to the maturity of my staff in supporting students. I would recommend their continued service to New York City school students in any capacity.

– Harry Sherman, Principal, The Castle Hill Middle School, New York (2007)

ESR provided technical assistance to Diploma Plus (DP) schools in New York and New England over two years, and put simply, their work has been stellar. ESR began working with the four DP schools in New York City during the spring of 2005 on advisory design and implementation, as well as related issues of school culture. We heard such good reports about their work with the schools that we hired them to work with us more extensively on the overall Diploma Plus initiative. Diploma Plus school staff have provided enthusiastic feedback to us about the technical assistance ESR has provided, and we have been very satisfied as well. We recommend them without qualification.

– Alex S. Hoffinger, Senior Program Manager, Diploma Plus (2007)
