Summary – Regina Jackson

Regina Jackson has made it her mission to invest heavily in the future of children, our nation's greatest resource. She has taken on the challenge of molding, and mentoring young people in her hometown of Oakland, CA in order to transform lives. She believes that EOYDC's biggest challenge is combating hopelessness. "When young people don't have high expectations, they often won't try. Because my staff and I believe our youth can perform at high levels, they often rise to meet and exceed those expectations".

Ms. Jackson provides community engagement, youth empowerment and leadership development resources. She ensures that the Center offers a safe, nurturing environment where young people can grow and thrive. Her theory of change model is focused on character development, readiness and access and thousands of EOYDC's youth have benefited personally and professionally from this program model.

Regina sets the strategic direction for the Center. She is the primary liaison to both boards of directors and trustees. Ms. Jackson is responsible for fiscal management, business development, talent acquisition and cultivating partnerships with corporations and other organizations. She serves on statewide and community boards and task forces. Regina is often called as a subject matter expert to deliver papers, workshops, and presentations both domestic and international. The International Diplomacy Council has sought Regina's expertise to counsel agencies in Indonesia, China, Brazil, Mexico and Nigeria. In support of President Obama's 100,000 strong initiative, Regina led a delegation of youth to China on cross cultural exchange. Her efforts have been tireless in setting a firm foundation and providing a replicable best practice model. She has charted a path for sustained growth, gaining corporate, local businesses and hometown celebrity support. Simply put, she has implemented a successful strategy which has had a positive impact on urban, multicultural youth.
