A Non-profit Agency for Children and Families

Statement of Qualifications

September 7, 2012

For more than 25 years, Seneca has been pursuing its mission to support children and families through their most difficult times. Started as a residential and day treatment program with six beds, the agency has now expanded to serve approximately 5,600 youth and families each year in counties throughout the state. Seneca offers a continuum of care for youth aged 3 to 21 who face the most profound emotional, behavioral and/or learning challenges. These services cover a wide range including a Residential-Based Service program, an emergency stabilization center that diverts youth from psychiatric hospitalization, community based wraparound services that serve youth at risk of group home placement, adoption support, a therapeutic preschool, day treatment services, and special day classes. One of our most innovative projects has been the development of the All In! model, a Response-to-Intervention approach that integrates special education and mental health services and shifts resources towards early identification and intervention. This model has been implemented in partnership with schools serving Oakland youth.

All of Seneca's services are informed by our model of Unconditional Care. This model is articulated in the book, Unconditional Care: Relationship-Based, Behavioral Intervention with Vulnerable Children and Families, written by our Clinical Director John Sprinson and Founder and CEO Ken Berrick and published by Oxford Press. Seneca's stance of "unconditional care" can be characterized both as a core value or principle as well as an actual method of intervention. In the former sense, it refers to our conviction and policy that we will not discharge clients from our programs for the behaviors that brought them to us in the first place. In the latter, unconditional care can be seen as an implicit treatment intervention that informs and infuses all interactions between staff members and clients. Integrating the three streams of relational, ecological, and behavioral approaches into comprehensive assessment and treatment planning, the Unconditional Care approach looks to understand a youth's internal working model and, in partnership with the youth and their family, develop interventions that build on the youth's strengths and disconfirm their unhelpful and negative thoughts about themselves and their role in their environment.

Seneca is committed to providing the highest-quality of care, evidenced by our accreditation by the Joint Commission. All agency employees, of which there are nearly 1,000 across the state, have at least a Bachelor's degree and receive intensive, ongoing clinical training and supervision. In fact, Seneca's Training Institute trains thousands of public and private agency staff throughout the state in best practices and evidenced-based models for caring for vulnerable youth and families.

Seneca looks forward to continuing its cooperative and productive partnership with the Oakland Unified School District through the establishment of this school-based Clinical Intervention Specialist position.
