Professional Development

We provide comprehensive professional development for principals, teachers and other school staff designed to help school communities build effective relationships with parents - particularly those who have been traditionally uninvolved.

We assist districts in creating a school environment where all parents are valued and viewed as a key component to student success. We believe that partnering with parents results in increased student achievement.

The school staff trainings are often two hours in length and give teachers time to think through their current parent involvement practices. They identify challenges they face in partnering with parents and create goals and action plans for improving those relationships. They are given specific tools for partnering with all parents.

Teachers rarely have time to sit and think about their goals for parent involvement. The workshops help teachers understand why partnering with all parents is essential to academic achievement and give them the invaluable time to plan for success.
