Background:
(A one paragraph explanation of why the consultant's services are needed.)

The consultant is needed to provide mental health services to our students. Many of the issues that prevent our students from performing academically stem from deep trauma or adjustments that students are attempting to make both in and out of school. These issues can often create academic barriers for students if the social and emotional needs are not met. There are very limited mental health supports for Title-1 students and their families within the community, yet these issues have a tremendous impact on the student's ability to succeed in school.

Discussion:

QUALIFICATIONS

Established in 1968, the Wright Institute is fully accredited by the Accrediting Commission for Senior Colleges and Universities of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges. The Doctoral Program in Clinical Psychology is accredited by the Committee on Accreditation of the American Psychological Association. The Wright Institute was founded with the mission of educating Clinicians to Society--clinicians whose practice will meet the needs of the diverse communities of the San Francisco Bay Area. Committed to integrating knowledge of social issues with clinical psychology, students learn to analyze and evaluate research, theory, and practice; and make appropriate use of the evolving body of psychological knowledge. Students are educated to practice with a high degree of ethical standards and professional competence in an environment that is intellectually challenging, respectful, supportive, and inclusive.

The median age of the Wright's doctoral students is 31, meaning that the typical Wright Institute student has significant life experience prior to returning to graduate school. Twenty-five percent of Psy.D. students identify as students of color. In 2006, the Wright Institute opened a new Master of Arts in Counseling Psychology program. By offering the master's curriculum in a weekend-only format, the Wright's educational approach became more accessible to adult learners working in a variety of human service fields.

A key theme woven into the Wright experience is the exploration of how social and cultural contexts influence the way a person experiences others and the world. The Wright believes that becoming competent to deal with human diversity is an integral part of being an effective clinician. By enhancing their understanding of the range of human differences, practitioners can work and communicate effectively with a wide variety of communities and groups.

The School-Based Collaboration project is an important vehicle for carrying out the mission of the Wright Institute. The Wright Institute community has significant expertise and resources to bring to bear, include the following:

- Clinical and Training Expertise: The Wright Institute has been providing hands-on training to students in clinical settings since 1972 and has graduated approximately 1000 students. For over 35 years, the Wright Institute Clinic has served low-income community members and provided training to approximately 25 doctoral students annually; more recently, the Cognitive Behavioral Clinic was established to serve the community and provide an alternative training site for our students. Further, the Wright Institute is on the cutting edge of developing models for integrated delivery of psychological services in community health clinics, through its grant-funded Integrated Healthcare Psychology Training Program. Beginning as a pilot in 2004, and now in its third funded year of operation, the IHPTP's innovative hands-on psychology training program aims to integrate mental health service delivery with medical care by placing its psychology trainees in a primary care setting, to work side-by-side with physicians in medical visits and to offer direct psychological services, such as assessment, behavioral interventions and psychotherapy to uninsured patients.

Through these and other programs, the Wright Institute has demonstrated its commitment to educating graduate students to apply psychological knowledge, proven practices and skills, not just to treat clinical problems, but to appreciate and cultivate the strengths of underserved communities to promote wellness, recovery and resiliency.

- Theoretical knowledge: The Wright Institute's 38 faculty draw on a broad range of theoretical orientations, including cognitive behavioral, narrative, family systems, social justice, contemporary psychoanalytic, and relational approaches. They are chosen from the Bay Area's diverse clinical community for their practical expertise, theoretical sophistication, and ability to integrate theory with a hands-on approach to actual clinical situations. Our goal is to teach students to integrate the most relevant theories based on scientific knowledge into their clinical practice.
- Volunteer capacity: The SBC program is able to draw on the enthusiastic voluntary support of our students and clinical supervisors. The majority of our clinical supervision is donated by licensed Wright Institute alumni. Master's-level, and first and third year Psy.D. students provide clinical and consultation services based on their level of expertise. In this way, we can provide appropriate services in an especially efficient and cost effective manner.

Conditions

Transfer Or Waiver Of Rights Of Recovery
Against Others

We will waive the right of recovery we would otherwise have had against another person or organization, for loss to which this insurance applies, provided the insured has waived their rights of recovery against such person or organization in a contract or agreement that is executed before such loss.

To the extent that the insured's rights to recover all or part of any payment made under this insurance have not been waived, those rights are transferred to us. The insured must do nothing after loss to impair them. At our request, the insured will bring suit or transfer those rights to us and help us enforce them.

This condition does not apply to medical expenses.
