Small Groups, Big Results

BookNook Scope of Work

BookNook will operate a literacy tutoring program using the BookNook platform in OUSD schools.

In collaboration with school leadership and staff, BookNook will identify students based on reading level and support provided by program.

- Work with school to provide one on one or small group tutoring services to students using BookNook's web-based application.
 - Students enrolled in groups identified in collaboration with school staff
 - Students placed at appropriate level in curriculum based on school's most recent assessment data
 - School admin and teachers will have access to online data reports on the BookNook platform

Small Groups, Big Results

BookNook is on a mission to reinvent the where, how, and who of small group learning for elementary school students. We offer easy-to-use tools for educators and non-educators that empower them to provide powerful in-person reading instruction that gets great results. We currently partner with over 100 elementary schools and nonprofits all across America.

Platform

BookNook is a web application that syncs up to five devices of any kind so that groups can work together in a coordinated set of rigorous reading exercises

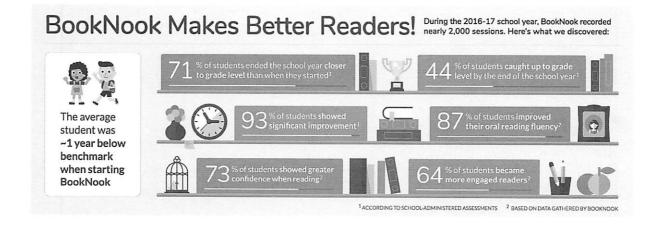

Once online, groups access a library of algorithmically-recommended custom texts woven together with a structured curriculum and engaging educational games.

BookNook also offers a host of customizable reporting features to provide real-time, actionable information to users and educators.

Pilot & Results

In the 2016-17 school year, 28 elementary schools and community organizations participated in paid alpha and beta pilots of the BookNook platform. Assessments from the initial cohort have shown exciting results.

About Us

Based in Oakland, California, BookNook is a social enterprise with a particular focus on supporting children in traditionally disenfranchised communities. We are committed to providing scalable tools with a strong basis in research. We also believe that education technology is at its best when it supports highly engaged face-to-face learning.

Founder

Michael Lombardo previously served as CEO of Reading Partners, one of the largest children's literacy nonprofits in the United States, which he grew from a small startup to a national leader working with over 80 urban and suburban school systems and hundreds of schools across 11 states. Michael also serves as a Social Entrepreneur in Residence at Stanford University and is a founding Advisory Council member of President Barack Obama's My Brother's Keeper Alliance.
